GUIDELINES FOR THE RECEPTION OF HOLY COMMUNION

As Catholics, we fully participate in the celebration of the Mass when we receive Holy Communion, the true Body and Blood of the Lord. Yet, we Catholics should receive Holy Communion only when we are living in communion with the Catholic Church and in the state of sanctifying grace and have made the appropriate fast from food and drink.

Because of the connection we draw between being in full communion with the Catholic Church and receiving Holy Communion, we cannot invite those who are not Catholic to share in Holy Communion with us. Still, we welcome all to this celebration of the Mass as our brothers and sisters, and pray that our common baptism and the action of the Holy Spirit will one day draw us closer "...that all may be one." (John 17:22)

PRINCIPAL'S CORNER

Greetings St. Andrew,

It is that time of the year when we have the opportunity to come together for an evening of food, fun and fellowship. Tuesday, October 18th is the 33rd Annual Taste of the Town, held at the Myrtle Beach Convention Center from 4:00pm-10:00pm. Come taste sample foods from the finest restaurants around the Grand Strand. This event is vital to the sustainability of our school. Last year, funds from Taste of the Town helped us install the beautiful new fence around our Kindergarten playground and other safety systems in the school. All of these safety measures are for the wellbeing of our children. We were able to add a Curriculum and Technology Coach to our team with the use of these funds, and we attended to other technology needs. We are so grateful for your patronage. Our faculty, parents and students send out a sincere thank you to those of you who have offered to volunteer. Taste of the Town is truly a signature event, a community effort, and illustrates the support of our parish for Catholic education. I look forward to seeing you on Tuesday evening!

Thank you,
Debbie Wilfong

LIFE MATTERS: DOCTOR-ASSISTED DEATH BY SUICIDE BY WILLIAM L. TOFFLER, MD

A central facet of traditional medical ethics has been embodied in the phrase "First, do no harm." Specifically, the original Hippocratic Oath, recited by physicians for millennia, ensured that they would give no deadly drug, even if asked. Sadly, few medical school graduates are still being asked to recite this oath. Instead, the door has been thrown open for some doctors to participate in, and even promote, giving deadly drugs with the direct intent to end human life. For such doctors, the time-honored principle of avoiding harm has been cast aside as they become willing accomplices to killing their patients.

In turn, there has been a profound shift in attitude in my state of Oregon in the fifteen years since voters narrowly embraced assisted suicide—a shift that, I believe, has been detrimental to patients, degraded the quality of medical care, and compromised the integrity of my profession.

Since assisted suicide became an option, I have had at least a dozen patients discuss this option with me in my practice. Most of the patients who have broached this issue weren't even terminally ill.

6 One of my first encounters with this kind of request came from a patient with a progressive form of multiple sclerosis. "Joe" was in a wheelchair yet lived a very active life. In fact, he was a general contractor and quite productive. While I was seeing him, I asked him about how it affected his life. He acknowledged that multiple sclerosis was a major challenge and told me that if he got too much worse, he might want to "just end it." I responded, "It sounds like you are telling me this because you might ultimately want assistance with your own assisted suicide if things get worse." He nodded affirmatively, and appeared relieved that I seemed to understand.

I told Joe that I could readily understand his fear and his frustration and even his belief that assisted suicide might be a good option for him. But, I added should he become sicker or weaker, I would work to give him the best care and support available. I told him that no matter how debilitated he might become, at least to me, his life was and would always be inherently valuable. As such, I would not recommend, nor could I participate in, his assisted suicide. Joe simply said, "Thank you."

The truth is that we are not isolated, self-sufficient individuals.

Every human being is part of a huge network of interdependent relationships with others. How physicians respond to the patient's request for lethal drugs can have a profound effect on a patient's choices as well as on his view of himself and his inherent worth. When a patient says I want to die, it may simply mean I feel useless. When a patient says I don't want to be a burden, it may really be a question, Am I a burden? ...Many studies show that assisted suicide requests are almost always for such psychological or social reasons.

...There has never been any documented case of assisted suicide in Oregon because there was actual untreatable pain. The law does not require that the patient have unbearable suffering, or any suffering for that matter. The actual Oregon experience has been a far cry from the televised images and advertisements that seduced the public to embrace assisted suicide. In statewide television ads, a woman named Ratty Rosen claimed to have killed her daughter with an overdose of barbiturates because of intractable cancer pain. This claim was later challenged and shown to be false. Yet, even if it had been true, it would indicate inadequate medical care, not grounds for assisted suicide.

What about the potential gain to family members of the so-called "suicide" of a "loved one?" Such gain could be in the form of an inheritance, a life insurance policy or even simply freedom from previous care responsibilities. Because there is no requirement for witnesses at the time of ingestion, who is to say that the deadly drug was ingested voluntarily? Who knows whether a patient experienced a change of heart but was overfilled by a "loved one?" In reality the entire paradigm of "assisted" suicide is wide open to elder abuse. ...

In Oregon, I regularly receive notices that the State's Medicaid health plan will no longer pay for many important services and drugs for my patients, even including some pain medications. At the same time, assisted suicide is full covered and sanctioned by the State of Oregon (funded by our collective tax dollars). This "rationed" health care from the State itself - one of the largest insurers in Oregon - is putting lives at risk.

Barbara Wagner, a retired school bus driver, learned this lesson first hand. Barbara had been in remission from her lung cancer. When it recurred, her oncologist wanted her to be given a drug that (statistically) would increase the chance of her being alive in one year by 45%. The State of Oregon denied this treatment stating that her prognosis wasn't good enough to warrant expensive medication to treat her cancer.

Yet in the same letter denying coverage for her medication, the State offered full coverage (100%) for her assisted suicide. Rather than being embarrassed about their discriminatory opinion letter, health officials

(and even the governor) defended the practice. What implications does this attitude portend for national health care reform? How many older individuals with serious illnesses or disabilities could be determined "no longer worth treatment" under federal cost-saving measures?

Today, promoters of assisted suicide have succeeded in spreading assisted suicide to Washington State and they continue to push for legalization in numerous other states. Using seductive euphemisms for situational killing, including death with dignity, choice in dying, and aid-in-dying, they deliberately distort end-of-life care and options while fanning the flames of fear of intractable suffering at death. They claim to advocate for patients and cite numerous, so-called "safeguards." In reality, the assisted suicide laws in Oregon and Washington are severely flawed and really don't provide protections for patients.

For example, patients accessing assisted suicide are supposed to be of sound mind. Yet fully 25% of patients given prescriptions for lethal overdoses were found to be depressed. Many others had anxiety. The practice is supposed to be reviewed by state officials, yet the only data reported in the States of Oregon and Washington comes from second- or even third-hand reports from the doctors who wrote the prescription. Most of the doctors (about 90%) weren't even present at the time their patients took the drug overdose, thus, they really don't know what happened. ...

The lack of oversight and patient safeguards is consistent with the view of many who promote assisted suicide, that some individuals lack "dignity" due to their physical or mental condition and simply aren't worth the bother or expense of having their basic needs met. They are wrong.

In contrast, Catholic teaching recognizes the inherent value of all human life. We are indeed made in the image and likeness of God. As Catholics we celebrate and defend the sanctity of life in all of its natural stages. Each of us-regardless of age, race, physical or mental ability, or economic status-is inherently valuable. There is no stage of life that is insignificant. When every life is respected, when physicians, family members and other caregivers respond generously to the needs of vulnerable persons in their care, we all benefit.

CATECHISM OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

Big News:
the Catechism of the Catholic Church
is back in the Pews!
7,262 went home already!

One of the greatest achievements of Pope John Paul II was the promulgation of the Catechism of the Catholic Church. This Catechism will serve as the standard for all future catechisms. "A sure norm for teaching the Faith", as the Pope said.

Please take and study this Catechism in your own home.

This Catechism costs $5.00 each. Inside the front cover of each book you will find an ENVELOPE as follows:

Dear Sister or Brother in Christ:

This Catechism of the Catholic Church is a most handy summary of the Faith that we profess as Christians. We hope you will take it to your home and read it.

We would thank you for helping out with the costs of this ministry - at $5.00 for each copy of this Catechism - if you are able to donate that amount (or more, or less) by placing your donation in this envelope and then into the collection basket.

Be blessed in the study of your Catechism.
